Nội dung giảng dạy:

3.2.1. Reading: What have we learned?

1. What can you see in each photo?

Ask students to look at the three photos. Ask: What can you see? Elicit any vocabulary in the photos that students know (e.g. satellite, space, Earth; city, car, buildings, green, trees; man, machine).

- Ask students in pairs or as a class to discuss the question. Elicit ideas in feedback.

ANSWERS

A the space station is going round the Earth

B an invisible car

C teleporting

2. Read the article. Match the photos (A-C) with the paragraphs (1-3).

First, try to figure out what the photos are showing. Then try to guess what may each paragraph convey.

- Photo A: a satellite; the information in the paragraph may have something to do with space or astronauts. (Paragraph 1)
- Photo B: an invisible car; the information in the paragraph may have something to do with invisible objects or people. (Paragraph 2)
- Photo C: teleporting ; the information in the paragraph may have something to do with transportation. (Paragraph 3)

3. Read the article again. Is the information in the text (✓) or not in the text (X)?

Before you read

Read the following tips and try to apply them to the task.

1. Read the given article and try to understand the main idea of the article.
2. Read the sentences of the question set carefully to understand the meaning. Identify the keywords that will help you to locate the relevant information.
3. Go to the article and try to find the correct location with the help of keywords. Remember, in most cases, you will not get the exact keyword. So, Look for different words with similar meanings. If you can't find any information relevant to the statement, then the information is not in the text.
4. Remember, to increase the difficulty level, the question statements will be paraphrased, i.e. the sentences will be written differently.
5. The question statements follow the order of the article. So, the answer to the second question of the set will come after the answer to the first question and so.

While you read.

1 Scientists have learned to do many things.

Many things: send people into space, discover new medicine, invent the Internet and design robots → the information is in the text

2 Some people have robots in their homes → the information is not in the text

3 Scientists don't know everything.

don't know everything: something scientists haven't been able to do; → the information is in the text

6 Scientists have tried different solutions to transport problems.

solutions to transport problems: solve the problems of transport. the information is in the text

3.2,2 Vocabulary: LEARNING

1. WORDBUILDING: Synonyms and Antonyms

Synonyms are words with similar meaning, or very nearly the same as, another word in the same language. For example, "close" is a synonym of "shut".

Note that a synonym may share an identical meaning with another word, but the two words are not necessarily interchangeable.

The following pairs of words are synonyms.

✓ Discover vs Invent

discover means recognizing something that already exists for the first time, that nobody has found before. Invent means creating something totally new with one's own ideas and development.

✓ Study vs Practise

Study means devote time and attention to acquiring knowledge on (an academic subject), especially by means of books.

Practise means to do or play something regularly or repeatedly in order to become skilled at it.

✓ Know vs Understand

Know means to simply hold a fact in your mind: "I know the sky is blue."

Understand means to know the reason behind it: "I understand why the sky is blue."

Antonyms are words with opposite meanings. For example, good - bad

The following pairs of words are antonyms.

✓ Learn vs Teach

Teach means giving lessons about a particular subject to a group of learners.

Learn means gaining knowledge by studying, being taught and experiencing.

✓ Pass vs Fail

Pass means a successful completion of an examination or course.

Fail means to be unsuccessful in achieving one's goal.

✓ Remember vs Forget

Remember means not to forget

2. Choose the best option to complete the sentences.

1 Can you learn / teach me how to speak Spanish?

2 Everyone in the class is going to pass / fail the test because their English is very good.

- 3 I can't go out tonight. I need to study / practise for a history exam tomorrow.
- 4 Can you forget / remember the past tense of the verb 'go'?
- 5 My teacher explained it, but I still don't know / understand how it works.

3.3. Grammar: Present perfect

Grammar: Present perfect

Use

We use the present perfect tense to talk about an action in the past. We often use it when we don't know exactly when the action happened, or we don't say because it's not important. The past action is usually important in the present.

Ask Michael for help. He's done a German course. (= He did a course in the past. He knows some German now.)

	Structure	Example
(+)	I/you/we/they + have + PP She/he/it + has + PP	I've failed my exam. They've learned a lot. He's forgotten the address. She's designed a robot.
(-)	I/you/we/they + have + not + PP (have not = haven't) She/he/it + has + not + PP (has not = hasn't)	We haven't seen this film. You haven't finished the test yet. He hasn't done the homework. She hasn't come back.
(?)	Have + I/you/we/they + PP? Has + She/he/it + PP?	Have you seen him? Has she called you? Have they submitted the report? Has he ever been abroad?

Past participles

Past participles can be regular or irregular.

- With regular verbs, we add -ed to the infinitive form.

look - looked - looked study - studied - studied

● Other past participles are irregular. With some irregular verbs, the past participle is the same as the past simple form.

make - made - made

hear - heard - heard

● With other irregular verbs, the past participle is different from the past simple.

eat - ate - eaten

write - wrote - written
